

Lesson 2

Part 1

ディクテーション ワークシート

Hello there! Today I'm going to talk about curry. When you hear the word "curry," what country do you think of? Yes, India! Many of you know that India is the home of curry. However, do you know that curry is not the name of the dish in India?

Of course, there are many dishes similar to curry in India. For example, people often (1 ) meat or vegetables with (2 ) (3 ). However, they do not call such dishes "curry." A long time ago, the British people began to use the word "curry" to explain such Indian dishes. It comes from the word "kari." It means a (4 ) or soup in Tamil.

Class No. Name

---

Lesson 2

Part 1 【解答】

1. stew
2. various
3. spices
4. sauce

Lesson 2

Part 2

ディクテーション ワークシート

In the past, India was a British (1                      ). I think you have learned about it in world history class. In 1772, Warren Hastings, a clerk in the East India Company, brought back rice and many spices from India. He had often eaten curry with rice in India, so he wanted to eat it in the UK, too. Other people in the UK tried it and liked it. After that, curry (2                      ) became popular in the UK.

At the beginning of the 19th century, the first curry (3                      ) appeared. Until then, people needed to work hard to (4                      ) the many spices to make curry. With the help of curry powder, people were able to make curry more easily and its (5                      ) (6                      ) across the UK. Also, the British began to make curry thicker with flour. They used a recipe for stew, a traditional British food, to change curry to their own taste.

Class    No.    Name

---

Lesson 2

Part 2 【解答】

1. colony
2. gradually
3. powder
4. mix
5. popularity
6. spread

Lesson 2

Part 3

ディクテーション ワークシート

British curry later (1 ) across the sea and came to Japan. Early in the Meiji (2 ), Japanese people first (3 ) curry powder and started to make curry. At that time, curry was an expensive dish. For the price of a plate of “curry and rice,” a person could eat eight bowls of soba. Also, in those days, curry was a little strange. Surprisingly, people put long green onions and frog meat in it!

Since the late Meiji era, curry has been popular all over Japan. Some people say it is because the Japanese (4 ) (5 ) curry as a food for its (6 ). Curry was an (7 ) food for soldiers because they could make it in large amounts and serve it to many soldiers at once. When the soldiers went back home, they took the recipe for curry with them. Because of this, curry became popular in many parts of Japan.

Class No. Name

---

Lesson 2

Part 3 【解答】

1. sailed
2. era
3. imported
4. military
5. adopted
6. soldiers
7. ideal

Lesson 2

Part 4

ディクテーション ワークシート

With the spread of curry, a lot of new (1) foods appeared in Japan. For example, a Japanese restaurant (2) curry-udon around 1904. A Japanese bakery started to sell curry-pan, curry-filled bread, in 1927. Later, (3) snacks also appeared. You have probably eaten some of them. Among all these curry-based foods, curry (4) and curry in a (5) were the most successful. These foods were (6) to countries such as China, South Korea, and the US. Now curry in a pouch is eaten even in the International Space Station (ISS).

Curry was born in India. Later, people in the UK and Japan started to eat curry. Now people all over the world eat it.

That's all for my speech. Thank you. I (7) you are very hungry now. Let's go to the cafeteria and have some curry!

Class No. Name

---

Lesson 2

Part 4 【解答】

1. curry-based
2. invented
3. curry-flavored
4. roux
5. pouch
6. exported
7. suppose